CAN SEBASTIAN

IBIZA, SPAIN

Jade Jagger's home, a 500-year-old hilltop finca tucked away just above sleepy little San Juan, is not the boho retreat you might expect. Instead, clean lines and sleek design rule – whitewashed cubes, shady courtyards, angular architecture. The five bedrooms have sheltered a sleeping Kate Moss, among others. Throw yourself into the late-night shenanigans further south, then crawl back here for delicious downtime. Bask on a daybed by the lapis-coloured curved pool, walk down to Cala Xuclar beach for a lunch of grilled prawns and fruity sangria at the hippest little chiringuito, or have your own party up at the house – there's a table for 16 in the shade of a glitterball-bedecked olive tree.

Sleeps 10 Book it Deliciously Sorted offers seven nights from £8,085 (deliciouslysortedibiza.com or 00 34 971 197 867).

BIGHORN

REVELSTOKE, CANADA

Deep in the wilds of British Columbia, this is the king of heli-lodges. An eight-bed chalet with home cinema, indoor pool, gym, sauna, outdoor hot tub and vast games room with a pool table and all manner of gizmos to play with. The blood-red dining room is terrifically grown up, but you can also eat in the super-charged kitchen around a teppanyaki grill. The ultimate thrill, though, is the private helipad, from which you can access vast open spaces and the most awesome heli-ski terrain. The resort itself also has some of the best lift-accessed skiing in North America. Come here to ski hard and play hard (leave the sprats at home).

Sleeps 16 Book it James Orr Heliski offers seven nights from £40,000 (heliski.co.uk or 01799 516964).

LA FRAISSINÈDE

LANGUEDOC, FRANCE

In the far corner of a beautiful uninhabited plain, on what feels like the last outpost before the Pyrenees, stands La Fraissinède – a big, elegant, gloriously kitted-out farmhouse surrounded by banks of fragrant lavender. Inside, it is coffee-table-book modern (but not starkly so). The double-height drawing room, where sun pours in from all sides through floor-to-ceiling windows, leads into an enormous, cook's dream of a kitchen: gigantic and airy, filled with every gadget imaginable, plus all sorts of pretty china. It's a place for a large raucous gang (of the sort that travel club class) or for party-lovers who want to fill the house with friends but no longer need to dance till dawn every night.

Sleeps 12 Book it ITC Classics offers seven nights from £7,655 (itcclassics.co.uk or 01244 355550).
